Description

Three-Car Garage House Plan With Living Quarters

Did you know the average American household owns 2.28 vehicles? Well, now that you know, that extra 0.28 hogging space in your driveway is enough proof that you need a three-car garage.

For starters, a garage house is a welcome asset in any home. It helps keep your vehicles safe from vandalism, theft and the weather. It also acts as a storage room for your tools, workbench, recreational equipment, utility sink and laundry appliances. The list goes on.

This three-car garage plan measures 24 by 48 feet, which is a pretty big garage to house your vehicles as well as your tools. If you drive a long vehicle like a Toyota Sienna, Ford Explorer, Chrysler Town & Country or a Honda Odyssey, you'll find the garage accommodates you perfectly.

The garage also serves as an ideal space for when you have guests at your house. It has a side service entrance that leads to the upper living space through the stairs. Here, you will find a spacious loft bedroom complete with a full bath, large closet and a small, convenient kitchen. As if that's not enough, there's a storage area under the stairs to keep a few of your valuables and other stuff.

One thing you'll come to appreciate about your three-car garage is the value that comes with it when selling your house. When you put your house on the market, you're in direct competition with all other houses in your price range. In other words, if you price your house the same as another house in the same desirable area, why would someone else choose your house over the other? Simple — because your house has a three-car garage!

Why Choose Three-Car Garage Plans From Nelson Design Group, LLC?

Our collection of three-car garage plans with living quarters are designed in a wide variety of styles and designs, including rooflines and several beautiful exterior and interior finishes. Most of our three-car garage plans offer three separate doors or one large door for the vehicles and a smaller one for accessing the upper rooms.

If you are looking for a three-garage plan for your car, motorcycle or workshop space, Nelson Design Group, LLC has just the right option for you.
